OWWA PDOS ADVISORY NO. 01
SERIES OF 2007

ATTENTION : ALL PDOS PROVIDERS AND TRAINORS

SUBJECT: POLICIES AND GUIDELINES CONCERNING THE NEW LIST OF ACCREDITED PDOS PROVIDERS AND TRAINORS

This is to inform all concerned that starting June 15, 2007 only those PDOS Providers and Trainors who officially re-registered with OWWA last December 2006 will be recognized as officially registered Providers and Trainors.

OWWA and POEA will no longer honor the PDOS certificates of those not included in the attached list. Same list be posted at all POEA and OWWA offices.

A. Validity of Accreditation

The accreditation of all Trainors and Providers shall be for two (2) years. Afterwhich, everyone will be required to renew their registration at OWWA three (3) months before the expiration of their accreditation.

Renewal of registration shall be based on:

1. Track record as provider/ trainor
2. Attendance to training/ refresher courses required by OWWA

B. Reporting and Evaluation

All PDOS Providers are also being reminded to adopt the PDOS Report Forms prescribed by OWWA and to submit their reports promptly within the first seven (7) days each month;

C. REVOCATION OF REGISTRATION

Non-cooperation of PDOS Providers or non- compliance of PDOS Providers/ Trainors to this advisory or to any improvements required by the OWWA-PDOS Team, after a month from receipt of corresponding notice, shall cause the revocation of registration at OWWA. The same shall be reported accordingly to POEA for appropriate action.

This Memorandum of Instruction shall take effect immediately.

THE SCHOOL UNIform, while convenient and inexpensive in the long run, does not allow much room for self-expression. This is why many college freshmen, intoxicated by freedom from balking school authorities, run amok and often go to extremes to express their individuality during the first few weeks of class.

A few months ago, a bunch of high school seniors asked my friends and I what we wore for the first week of college classes. They were genuinely excited at the prospect of wearing casual clothes every day, and wanted to get wardrobe advice.

"Ah," a friend from a neighboring school proclaimed, "I dressed up like there was a party every day, because for the first time in my life, we were exposed to huge

The pregnancy, the birth, the sleepless nights, the amazing moments—this is the story of young dad Rafa Alunan

Fatherhood, for the first time

EVEN BACK WHEN HE WAS single, young businessman Rafael Louis Alunan had visions of becoming a father. Visions of him driving with his son in the front seat after picking him up from school. Or the two of them playing basketball. Or talking to his son about what to do and not to do on his first date.

Rafa is closer to seeing these visions turn into reality, with the birth of his son Rafael Louis José Alunan last November.

"To see it was surreal. Even today, when I see my son, I get overwhelmed. I still can't believe I'm a father."

The pregnancy

His wife, bag designer Amina Aranaz, got pregnant two months after their beautiful old Hollywood-themed wedding in January 2006. The pregnancy was fairly easy for the young couple. "It was very easy for me. Amina was so pleasant. Despite the mood swings, she was still so pleasant, so emotionally stable."

The 'Blackout' challenge

By Bayani San Diego Jr.

TITO VELASCO, CHIEF operating officer of Unitel Entertainment, acknowledges that "Blackout," the film his company has produced, is facing an uphill climb as it begins its local run today.

"It's a challenge for us," he admits. "But it is important to offer a nonformula film so that, in time, we can build a better appreciation for movie-making and the art of story-telling among local audiences."

Described as a psychological thriller, "Blackout" bravely casts box-office star Robin Padilla in an unconventional part, says its director Ato Bautista. "He is portraying a role that's the opposite of his tough-guy image. A troubling, an alcoholic."

Attracting a mass audience for a non-formula film can be an uphill climb, but someone has to do it, says this team of cineastes

"Robin wanted to do something different," says executive producer Tony Gloria.

That could be a big gamble, but Padilla, Bautista, Gloria and the Unitel team willfully stepped forward.

"It's part of our initiative for new filmmakers," Velasco explains. "Ato was among the first to avail of this new package. We made the equipment and facilities of Unitel's sister companies, Engine Room, Optima Digital and Outpost, available to him."

Shot on Panasonic Varicam HD, Bautista's movie was later blown up to 35mm film by Optima and 14 prints were made by Optimum.

"We want to encourage young filmmakers to tell the stories they want to tell," says Velasco.

In exchange, Unitel secured distribution rights for the movie that is now making the rounds of film festivals abroad, Velasco volunteers.

Bautista relates that "Blackout" illustrates how a studio and an indie filmmaker can work well together.

"I had to consult Mr. Gloria on some decisions, both creative and business. Though there are some disagreements, we kept an open mind to reach a middle ground."
